Chapter 442: The Divine Judgment

A Breach of Prohibition

Despite Sung Jin-Woo's absolute decree forbidding the hunting of mythical creatures, a few among the multiverse's denizens dared to defy his will. Motivated by greed, arrogance, or sheer ignorance, they sought to exploit the rare and powerful creatures, believing themselves above the laws of the Godverse.

Their actions did not go unnoticed. The mythical creatures, though capable of immense power, were under the protection of Sung Jin-Woo and his countless emissaries. Any disturbance in the balance of the multiverse was swiftly detected by the angels and their watchful eyes.

The Command of the Absolute One

When reports of repeated violations reached Sung Jin-Woo, his divine presence emanated across the Godverse, shaking its very foundations. His voice echoed across realms, a decree of judgment:

"Those who hunt the sacred shall face the weight of divine justice. No creature under my protection shall suffer by mortal hands."

He commanded his angels, led by Gabriel and Azrael, to track down the offenders. The angels descended upon the multiverse like a silver storm, their radiant forms striking fear into the hearts of all who beheld them.

The Judgment of the Angels

The angels captured the offenders one by one. These were not ordinary hunters; they were individuals who had sought power through forbidden means—renegade soldiers, rogue shadowkins, fallen apostles, and even ambitious heavenly beings who had turned away from the light.

Once captured, they were brought before the Celestial Court, a realm within the Godverse where justice was administered under Sung Jin-Woo's divine authority.

"You have defied the Absolute One," Gabriel declared, his voice resonating like a thousand trumpets. "Your actions have threatened the harmony of the multiverse. For this, you shall face eternal retribution."

The offenders begged for mercy, but their pleas fell on deaf ears. Sung Jin-Woo's laws were absolute, and their defiance could not be tolerated.

The Eternal Prisons

Sung Jin-Woo created The Celestial Prisons, located deep within the Godverse. These prisons were cosmic structures, each the size of a planet, surrounded by layers of impenetrable divine barriers. Time flowed differently within these prisons—what felt like thousands of years inside was only a second outside.

The offenders were sentenced to thousands of years of imprisonment, a punishment far exceeding their natural lifespans.

"Even if they live for only centuries, their essence will remain bound to these prisons until their sentence is complete," Azrael announced as the prisoners were sealed away.

The prisons were designed to ensure that the offenders could neither escape nor perish. They were made to reflect upon their actions for what seemed like an eternity, their punishment serving as a warning to all who might consider defying the Absolute One.

The Reaffirmation of Order

With the offenders imprisoned, Sung Jin-Woo reinforced his decree, reminding all beings of the consequences of defiance. The angels spread his word across the multiverse, their radiant forms a constant reminder of his omnipotent presence.

The mythical creatures, now safe once more, continued to thrive under his protection. Their gratitude resonated through the realms, their songs of praise reaching Sung Jin-Woo in the Godverse.

"Order must be maintained," Sung Jin-Woo declared, his voice calm yet resolute. "The harmony of creation is my will, and my will is law."

The actions of the hunters served as a stark reminder that even in the presence of divine power, there would always be those who sought to challenge it. Yet, Sung Jin-Woo's judgment was swift and absolute, ensuring that the balance of the multiverse remained intact. The Godverse continued to shine as a beacon of order and justice, its creator unwavering in his role as the Absolute One.
